H.E Dr. Goodluck Ebele Azikiwe Jonathan the Chancellor of Cavendish University Uganda told the graduands to change their mindset if they want to be powerful. He was presiding over the 11th graduation of Cavendish University Uganda on Thursday August 25 at Speke Resort Munyonyo.

“For you my graduands, you are the reason we are having today’s celebration. Some people travelled from very far and some of us flew in from distant countries. I want you to take this occasion seriously and to reward all of us by focusing on life success,” H. E Goodluck said, adding that: “I want you to understand that what differentiates the powerful from the powerless in the 21st Century is mindset.”

The Chancellor further told the gathering of graduands, parents, academics and other dignitaries that powerful people can create a lifestyle of their choice because of their mindset. “The powerful have understood that they can create a lifestyle they desire. They are driven from within; they apply continuous learning and acquisition of relevant knowledge and skills to fill gaps and solve challenges of society while utilising the power of their mind,” the Chancellor said.

“Today’s accomplishment is a sufficient sign that you can achieve more if you continue to work hard. You have no excuse to fail. I charge you to go out and change the world beginning with your families and communities,” H. E Goodluck charged graduands.

The Chancellor also advocated for the scholarships of talented but disadvantaged African youths. “We will continue to focus on removing barriers to access of higher education for many African youths who are talented but disadvantaged by low incomes. We will, therefore, need to look for scholarships for the talented but poor youths, even if it means connecting them to loan schemes where they can pay later,” H. E Goodluck promised.

In his speech, the Chancellor also informed the congregation that graduates from Cavendish University Uganda are easily absorbed into the job market because of the skills they acquire at Cavendish.

“I am also proud of the fact that our current and former students are marketable and some are appointed into big offices of responsibility, a sign that the university education we offer is industry-relevant,” he said.

In addition, Prof. John Francis Mugisha the Vice Chancellor encouraged the graduands to confront the world since they have acquired relevant knowledge, skills and competences.

“We have equipped you with the required knowledge, skills and competences and exposed you to a rigorous academic process enriched with sufficient in-class and out-of-class experiences. With those, I am very confident that you will confront this world with courage and optimism; and change it for the better. I recommend you to the world of industry and Public Service for immediate recruitment to various positions. I know that you will perform,” Prof Mugisha said.

The Chief Guest, Principal judge at High Court of Uganda Dr. Justice Flavian Zeija told the graduands that: “Uganda’s job market is overwhelmed by the number of students who graduate every year that cannot be absorbed in the paid employment and you are expected to translate the knowledge you have attained in the class room into practical innovations from which you can earn.”

The theme of this 11th graduation was: “Universities through Covid-19: Strategies for recovering and surpassing pre-pandemic performance.”

H. E Goodluck was installed as Chancellor on August 26, 2021 during the 10th graduation at Speke Resort Munyonyo and he presided over the conferment of Degrees and award of Diplomas and Certificates on that day for the first time at CUU.

He is the third former Head of State to be appointed a Chancellor of Cavendish University Uganda. H.E. Dr Kenneth Kaunda, former President of the Republic of Zambia was the 1st Chancellor followed by H.E. Benjamin Mkapa, all deceased.

Airtel, Cavendish sign internet deal

BY BENJAMIN MWIBO

In a bid to promote education in Uganda, Airtel Uganda and Cavendish University Uganda have come into agreement to offer free internet services to Cavendish students.

This announcement was made on August 19 in a joint press conference between CUU and Airtel Uganda at the university’s main campus.

Mr David Mutabanura the Cavendish University Executive Director said that this move is aimed at lowering the cost of education in the post covid-19 era.

Many students have challenges in accessing internet because of its affordability. However, with this new development, Cavendish University students have a reason to rejoice.

“Students shall have the advantage to access the learning platforms or study portals anywhere at any time using Airtel network at a zero-rated cost,” Mr Mutabanura told the journalists.

Ms Sadiya Hussein the Head Corporate Sales-Enterprise Business at Airtel Uganda said that Airtel values education and that is why they are interested in supporting students in

“To help students continue studying in spite of the pandemic, Airtel Uganda shall not only stop at Cavendish University but to also open up to many other committed higher institutions of learning”, Ms Sadiya said, adding that: “This is an achievement to Airtel Uganda because it shows the company’s value addition to the society.”

Fresh graduates should change their mindset

There may be more competition in the job market nowadays for new entrants, but there are also other factors at play.

Fresh graduates are pickier than before, and are willing to accept only jobs which pay more. Many do not take into account the quality of their resumes or their exam results. They do not think about working their way up.

Rather than question why there are no jobs available, fresh graduates should instead ask themselves how they should create their own jobs.

The mindset of many fresh African graduates must change in order for them to be more competitive in the job market.

Psychologists define mindsets as the attitudes, beliefs, and perceptions about ourselves, other people, and the environments we're in.

You may have that mind-set, which can hold you back from doing things that scare you -- like exploring new careers or taking professional or personal risks -- that might transform your professional (and your personal) life.

This idea comes from researcher Carol Dweck, whose book Mindset is a great introduction to the concept.

Dweck argues that people bring two basic mind-sets to the things they do, and often a combination of the two.

The first is a growth mind-set, one that says that talent and skill are built over time and we can get better and smarter with practice. The second is a fixed mind-set, one that says that intelligence and skill are innate and cannot be changed or improved with effort.

Fresh graduates need growth mindset. Growth mindset refers to a person's belief that skills and abilities can develop, especially through hard work, trying challenging things, learning from failure, and adjusting strategies to accomplish goals.

Dear graduands, parents and sponsors, I take this occasion to congratulate you for attaining this big achievement.

I am fully aware of the rigorous process that students have to go through to reach the final stage of graduation. I know that nothing is ever simple and that our students to put in hard work, extra effort and untiring commitment to achieve this.

I am also aware that not every student that enrolls for a programme of study in a university makes it to the graduation. Completion rates in universities continue to dwindle due to several factors such as financial limitations, academic pressures, social and emotional challenges especially during pandemic times like these and inability to cope with the speed and rigours of the intellectual formation process. I therefore applaud your resilience and commitment to success.

As a parent, I know how anxious the parents can be when their children are pursuing university education knowing that unlike secondary schools, there is less monitoring and fewer social regulations based on assumptions that university students are mature learners.

H.E. Dr Goodluck Ebele Azikiwe Jonathan

Chancellor Cavendish University Uganda

Sometimes these assumptions are not correct and students easily fall prey to attractions of urban life where most universities are located. I therefore know your excitement as parents on seeing your children climb the academic hill to the very top. I congratulate you too.

I recognise the university leadership efforts to surpass its pre-pandemic performance at a time when many universities are still struggling to recover from the effects of Covid-19. I am aware that CUU has greatly surpassed its pre-pandemic staffing position with more staff having attained Doctoral Degrees thereby increasing the PhD ratio.

I also know that the university received seven Technical Experts from Nigeria who are paid by the home Government. I am very proud of our Law students who scooped awards after winning different Moot Court competitions demonstrating the good quality of education being offered here.

I got to learn that the Vice Chancellor was elected to the Board of the Inter University Council of East Africa (IUCEA), which is a regional body coordinating universities; and to the Regional Research and Development Working Group of the East African Technology Commission (EASTE-CO).

This is a sign of recognition of the contribution this university is making in the region. I congratulate Prof. John Mugisha, upon climbing to such heights. I know that he will become an effective ambassador of Cavendish University Uganda.

I thank the university for setting up a modern laboratory for physical sciences to support the programme of Higher Education Certificate and other science programmes. I am also proud of the fact that our current and former students are marketable and some are appointed into big offices of responsibility, a sign that the university education we offer is industry-relevant.

We should continue to ensure that our curriculum intersects and engages with the social and economic challenges within the national, regional, continental and global contexts; and that our students will need a sufficient dose of global comparative socio-economic tools of analysis to be able to examine the current situation and take advantage of gaps in different countries where there is immediate need for solutions at the local, national and international levels.

For you my graduands, you are the reason we are having today's celebration. Some people travelled from very far and some of us flew in from distant countries. I want you to take this occasion seriously and to reward all of us by focusing on life success.

I want you to understand that what differentiates the powerful from the powerless in the 21st Century is mindset. The powerful have understood that they can create a lifestyle they desire. They are driven from within; they apply continuous learning and acquisition of relevant knowledge and skills to fill gaps and solve challenges of society while utilising the power of their mind.

Today's accomplishment is a sufficient sign that you can achieve more if you continue to work hard. You have no excuse to fail. I charge you to go out and change the world beginning with your families and communities. May God bless you.

and innovative academic institutions from old-style, non-creative ones as the latter literally shut down while the former quickly deployed technology and continued to engage and effectively teach their students online.

CUU, having installed an effective learning platform in 2017 was among the few universities that seamlessly transitioned their learners to continue studying online.

While several institutions are still struggling to cope with effects of Covid-19, we as CUU decided to challenge ourselves to not just recover from the impact of the pandemic but to exceed our level of performance at the time of the pandemic outbreak. Hence, our theme for this year is:

“Surpassing Pre-Pandemic Performance Through Scholarship, Innovation and Growth”. We are still in the third quarter of the year but we have so far lived to the expectations of our theme: Twice, our Law students have won the national Moot Court competitions. Our lecturers are publishing with leading journals and winning research grants. Actually today, we are launching two journals: Cavendish Journal of Social Sciences and Management (CJSSM) and Cavendish Law Journal (CLJ).

For thought leadership, some of our senior staff have been recognised in various fora and others appointed to Boards of important national and regional bodies.

CCUU is now represented in the Board of Inter-University Council for East Africa and on the Regional Research Working Group of East African Technology Commission. We are seeing improved teaching and learning that is juxtaposed with a wide variety of student and staff experiences.

We have improved our internal processes such as assessment mechanisms, the turn-around time for marking and grading, student admission procedures, lecturer class attendance, and learner academic support through student peer-tutoring and establishment of academic consultation clinics.

I thank the staff and students of CUU for hard work, unwavering commitment, resilience and innovation that enabled us to surpass our performance. By the same token, I appreciate the oversight role and guidance provided by the NCHE as well as the support provided by our stakeholders especially Maarifa Education – our sponsors. We would be limping without all this support and collaboration.

I would like to remind the graduates of the CUU 2022 class that it is your duty as a generation to shape your world. We have equipped you with the required knowledge, skills and competences and exposed you to a rigorous academic process enriched with sufficient in-class and out-of-class experiences.

With those, I am very confident that you will confront this world with courage and optimism; and change it for the better. I recommend you to the world of industry and Public Service for immediate recruitment to various positions.

I know that you will perform. I wish you God's choicest blessings in all your endeavours. SUCCESS BEGINS AT CAVENDISH.

Congratulations, Class of 2022, the back-to-normal cohort on whose graduation we have all met again in person. Very well done!

We live in VUCA- volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous times. I commend your individual and group resilience and adaptability, which are imperative for survival. Dieter F. Uchtdorf rightly said, “it’s your reaction to adversity, not adversity itself that determines how your life story will develop”. You have written the first pages of your story well.

The unpredictability of the COVID-19 pandemic required that we set up flexible, agile and limber systems, steepen our learning curve and quickly come up with contingency measures like embracing Open, Distance and e-Learning.

Graduands, you cooperated by attending hybrid classes, video conferencing, virtual office time, alternative assessments, and meeting course requirements while acquiring skills that set them apart in the world of work. You embraced technology which is increasingly valuable in breaking down location barriers.

Cavendish University Uganda (CUU) had an extraordinary response to a challenging moment, surpassing prepandemic performance and steering us forward while transforming and inspiring students to reach their full potential in employment, entrepreneurship, and ethical leadership.

CUU opted for Coursera for Campus for students to tailor qualifications and competencies at the exit to the requirements of employers and entrepreneurship partners.

CUU acknowledged the need for growing involvement of government, enterprise and civil society in helping us to shape learning outcomes, influence career guidance, provide internship programmes and additional educational pathways, advise on faculty fitness and performance, and evaluate research projects and their impact.

We are happy to recognise the entities that have journeyed with us, particularly: CISCO, IBM, HUAWEI, ACCA, The American Embassy, Capital Markets Authority, Institute of Corporate Governance of Uganda, Uganda Red Cross Society, Joint Medical Stores, International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) Uganda, The Public Interest Law Clinic (PILAC), the Network of Public Interest Lawyers (NETPIL), Rotary Club of Kampala Metropolitan, Center for Health, Human Rights and Development (CEHURD), Foundation for Human Rights Initiative (FHRI), Barefoot

Law, Human Rights Network for Journalists-Uganda, Africa in the Moot Foundation, Uganda Law Society, Embassy of South Sudan, Media Challenge, Ultimate Media Consult, Parliament of Uganda, Office of the Prime Minister, Rubaga Hospital, Kiruddu Hospital, NWSC, KCCA, City abattoir, Vector Control Division, Kiteezi Dumping Site for Solid Waste Management and the Education Collaborative.

We appreciate the awarding companies at this graduation event for partnering with us to recognise our leading performers, helping us build confidence and skills, and providing training opportunities.

The pandemic brought enormous mental, physical and emotional strain to the students and staff alike. Students have experienced feelings of loss of purpose and doubt about their value, judgment and compassion; they have also suffered high levels of burnout trying to catch up with lectures and exams.

At CUU, we prioritise students' mental health and well-being by implementing trauma-informed pedagogy. We are in the process of starting a psychotherapy centre at Cavendish University to support mental health more comprehensively and help the Community and beyond heal from the trauma of the pandemic.

Graduands, skills can only take you so far in a career; mindset is equally important. We have guided you to become opportunity-minded learners that can drive innovation, identify pain points and enable value creation in your respective fields.

Grow the innovation mindset and embrace risk moving forward. Tap into lessons from your university and other organisations. As much as possible, continue learning every day.

Congratulations once again to the graduates, parents and guardians, the staff, and all CUU stakeholders.

Dr Olive Sabiiti

Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Academic Affairs)

Mr. David Mutabanura

Executive Director Cavendish University Uganda

It is a pleasure and a privilege for me to congratulate the Cavendish University Uganda Class of 2022. It's especially heartening, seeing as it has been 3 years since we were all able to gather at a full-fledged physical graduation ceremony!

I am especially aware that the Class of 2022 has had to endure unique circumstances to complete studies, from difficulties related to travel restrictions, illnesses, demises, and finance, to undertaking online classes and exams, for which we were the first university to be permitted by regulators in Uganda.

Our university has been generally successful in building on this initial recognition, by steering our students, staff and stakeholder communities into pole position in delivering unmatched quality digital education in Uganda and the region, and in fostering a strong collaboration between our staff and students, who have unambiguously embraced our new mission of transforming and inspiring our students to reach their full potential in employment, entrepreneurship, and ethical leadership.

Together, they have demonstrated that with a firm commitment to our mission, the right policies, sustained support from sponsors, parents, guardians and regulators, along with a student-centred teaching and learning approach, our university can reach a significantly much higher and more sustained level of performance across a wide range of academic and operational metrics.

Our university has been voted for the 4th straight year as Uganda's leading private university by consumers! Working with Airtel Uganda, our university was this year able to negotiate free internet for our staff and students seeking to access our online learning portals making the experience of our users that more pleasurable and affordable.

Little wonder that our student satisfaction surveys have remained generally high with Net Promoter Scores (NPS) consistently ranging above +20 and reaching highs of +60 in certain periods and for certain categories of students, including our flagship Faculty of Law whose students have consistently come on top in local, regional and international debates and moot competitions.

Our University Vice Chancellor, Prof. John Mugisha, was elected to represent Private Universities on the Board regulating higher education in Uganda, the National Council for Higher Education (NCHE) and the Board of the intergovernmental organisation that fosters collaboration among universities in the EAC region, the Inter University Council for East Africa (IUCEA).

Our academic staff, students and alumni have intensified their undertakings in quality research and publications culminating in 3 of them being ranked among the top 500 scientists in Uganda by the AD Scientific Index in its recent 2022 report.

This is the result of a sustained commitment by our university's sponsors, leaders, staff, students and stakeholder communities and it is a tribute to the strong vision and leadership that has been put in place over the past few years.

It is always heartening to get spontaneous messages from our students, in person and on our online media, commending the great work of our university and we recognise that it is a collective effort of which they play a very pivotal role, themselves.

To our graduands: Remember always, that there is a big and important question for you to answer throughout your life, a question so simple on paper, yet so difficult to answer in real life: "How useful is what I do?"

I wish once again to congratulate the Class of 2022. You have much already through your creativity, resilience and resourcefulness, demonstrated by your awards today. You are capable of accomplishing much more. Good luck and Godspeed!

Prof. Olubayi Olubayi

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE UNIVERSITY COUNCIL

The theme of this year's graduation is "universities through Covid-19: strategies for recovering and surpassing pre-pandemic performance."

For most universities worldwide, and indeed for most businesses, Covid-19 was a very bad thing, but also at the same time a very good thing. It was a very bad thing because hundreds of thousands of people died, and many economies nose-dived.

But it was also a very good thing because it forced upon humanity an enhanced appreciation of the powerful tools of the technologies of this 4th Industrial Revolution in which we live.

These technologies include internet-of-things, mobile money, video-based communications like Zoom, social-media, cloud computing, learning platforms, and artificial intelligence.

Covid-19 lockdowns unleashed a massive disruption of our routines, methods, assumptions, and lives. In my opinion, this massive disruption has been particularly good for African universities because most of our universities were still stuck in pre-4th-Industrial Revolution systems and methodologies that served our grand-parents well but cannot really serve us well in a highly competitive knowledge-based global economy of winners and losers.

In such a world the winners get richer, and losers get poorer. The winners grow more powerful, and losers grow more desperate.

Before the disruptions of Covid-19, our universities and our regulators did not value online teaching and learning, online assessments, online-virtual meetings, online tools, and online libraries.

Learning meant sitting in a room watching someone talking and writing on a whiteboard. And for decades we continued to sit in rooms watching teachers talking and writing, as if one can learn by passively watching others talk and write.

Before the disruption of Covid-19, a library meant a room holding thousands of books. After the Covid-19 disruption, a library means access to the global internet that holds billions of books, articles, images, models, algorithms, simulations, and tools for teaching, learning, and building solutions.

Before the disruption of Covid-19, we assumed that students and teachers must be in the same room in order to learn. Now we know that they could be in different countries as they learn and design solutions to important problems.

Before the Covid-19 disruption our students were limited to the few teachers on campus, now they have access to thousands of teachers who are willing to share their knowledge and skills through the creative commons of open educational resources. Before the disruption, a student was a student, and a teacher was a teacher.

After the disruption, the student may also be a teacher to many thousands of other people worldwide even as she continues to be a student; and the teacher can be a student as he or she chooses to engage in lifelong learning and upskilling.

Before the Covid-19 disruption, most of our universities actively limited themselves to a tiny fraction of human knowledge, skills, and tools. After the Covid-19 disruption, our universities have opened themselves up to the entire stock of human knowledge, skills, and tools that constitute the 4th Industrial Revolution.

It is a cliché that major world events such as wars and pandemics act as inflection points for human innovation because humans are forced to find ways to survive. Covid-19 was a major inflection point for innovation in education.

In order to "surpass pre-pandemic performance" our universities, including Cavendish University Uganda, must continue to fully embrace the new experiences of online teaching and learning by making sure that all our classes are blended, and that our educational philosophies move away from memorization to active learning, passionate problem-solving, and agile innovation.

Thank you, and God Bless.

On Thursday 25 August, Cavendish University Uganda held its 11th graduation ceremony at Speke Resort Munyonyo. The event started off at 10am with the master of ceremony Mr. Evans Maganda together with his co-MC Mrs. Flavia Tumusiime walking to the podium tent and started welcoming the graduands and other invited guests.

On arrival of the Chancellor at around 10:20am, Mr. Maganda instructed the gathering to stand as the Chancellor's procession walked in. The procession was led by the Uganda Police band. The band later played the anthems beginning with that of Uganda, East Africa, Nigeria and then Cavendish University. Mr. Maganda then opened with prayer.

The Chancellor with all the powers vested in him constituted the commencement of the 11th graduation ceremony, bringing the entire gathering into order.

The 'Lunyeye Ntgoro' traditional dance was performed by the Cavendish university Banyoro students, sending the congregation into ululation.

The former Vice Chancellor of Kenya College of Accountancy (KCA) Prof. Noah O. Midambawas was the commencement speaker and his speech was entirely on this year's theme of graduation, "Universities through Covid-19: Strategies for recovering and surpassing pre-pandemic performance.

The Cavendish University Uganda Guild President, Mr. Barnabas Ssekawu talked of 'Ubuntu' in his speech. Ubuntu is a Nguni Bantu term meaning "humanity."

After the speech from the guild president, the Vice Chancellor Prof. John F. Mugisha then delivered his speech, followed by the Chairman University Council, Prof Olubayi Olubayi who later on invited H.E Dr. Goodluck Ebele Azikiwe Jonathan the university Chancellor. The Chief Guest, Principal judge at High Court of Uganda Dr. Justice Flavian Zeija then delivered his speech.

Dr Olive Sabiiti the deputy Vice Chancellor delivered her speech and thereafter launched the two Academic Journals together with two of the journals' editors. The two Academic Journals include; The Cavendish University Law Journal (CULJ), and The Cavendish University Journal of Sciences and Management (CJSSM).

Mr. Michael Okopa, the Academic Registrar delivered his speech and he invited the deans of the four faculties; Law, Socio-Economic Sciences, Science and Technology, and Business and Management to present the graduands for their approval by the Chancellor.

By 2:10 pm the ceremony was drawing to an end. The ceremony ended with the recognition and awarding of the best performing students and other outstanding students.

The ceremony then ended with the anthems in the reversed order. The Chancellor's procession was later led out by the Uganda Police Band as the few invited guests went for luncheon.
